TEE FOR TWO

SUNNY weather greeted this couple who were among the first wave of golfers to take to Balmoral golf course this week as a number of lockdown easing measures went live.

Churches began welcoming the faithful for private prayer and reflection and council recycling facilities and garden centres opened their doors.

The rules on socialising were relaxed, with up to six people now permitted to gather in a public space while drive-through cinemas and open-air concerts and theatre performances also got the green light.

Social distancing must still be observed in all instances.

MELA GOES ONLINE

South Belfast festival turns virtual after cancellation

DISAPPOINTMENT over the cancellation of Mela 2020 this week was tempered by the announcement that a celebration will still go ahead – in a programme of virtual events which will shortly be announced.

The 14th Botanic Park celebration of ethnic arts and culture has fallen victim to the Covid crisis, but organisers are working hard to ensure that a week-long online festival in August will prove to be the next best thing.

“We are all looking forward to marking the festival online this year with an amazing line up of music, dance and art for all the family,” Krishan Tandon said on behalf of Belfast Mela.
